From The Literary World, Volume 26, 1895: The first anniversary of Stevensons death is almost here. He was only forty-four when the summons came for him to leave the beauty of his adopted home for his true heritage of immortality; in the midst of his work, when the possibilities of the future were still brilliant, the end came. He can have no better epitaph than the sentences which end ?s Triplex: In the hot-fit of life, a-tiptoe on the highest point of being, he passes at a bound on to the other side. The noise of the mallet and chisel is scarcely quenched, the trumpets are hardly done blowing, when, trailing with him clouds of glory, this happy-starred, full-blooded spirit shoots into the spiritual land.
