

The Annual Or Obituary of the Members of the Society of Friends in Great Britain and Ireland (Classic Reprint)

In issuing the third number of the New Series of the Annual Monitor, the Editors have again to acknowledge the very kind attention of their numerous friends, in supplying them with the information required for the work. The Obituary of the present year, is, they believe, as nearly correct as it can be expected to be: they have no reason to believe that there are any omissions. Being, however, desirous of giving as nearly as possible an exact return of the deaths which have taken place in the Society within twelve months, they have not inserted those that have been reported to them which have occurred after the period prescribed, viz., the end of the Ninth month; and they intend in future to make this their general rule. The number of memorials in connexion with the Obituary which it appeared desirable should be inserted, has greatly exceeded the usual amount, and has not left room for any additional articles. The Editors are from year to year reminded how much the interest and instruction of their little work depends on the matter communicated by their friends. Although with respect to many who are believed to have died in the Lord, there may not be any particulars to communicate to the public, we do not doubt that in proportion as the professors of Christ amongst us are found abiding in Him, the true vine, and submitting to the pruning hand of the good Husbandman, there will not lack records which will hold out the language of instruction, and declare the mercy and the goodness of the Lord.
